I. THE UNITED NATIONS, WHAT IT IS AND ITS HISTORY

The United Nations is an organization of nations which is dedicated to maintaining international peace and security.

The name United Nations was adopted during World War II to denote the countries that were opposed to the Axis powers. Later, it was used for the name of the world organization.

The first major step towards the formation of the UN was taken at the Dumbarton Oaks Conference, August 21 - October 7, 1944, in Washington, D.C., by diplomats from the Big Four powers (US, United Kingdom, USSR, China). Later at the San Francisco Conference, France and several other countries joined in the signing of the Charter of the United Nations on June 26, 1945. The Charter came into force on October 24, 1945. United Nations Day is celebrated on that day.

II. ORGANS OF THE UNITED NATIONS AND THEIR FUNCTIONS

There are six main organs: General Assembly, Security Council, Economic and Social Council, Trusteeship Council, International Court of Justice, and the Secretariat. All are at the United Nations headquarters in New York City except the International Court of Justice, which is in the Peace Palace in The Hague, The Netherlands.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY

The General Assembly is the main deliberative organ for the United Nations. It organizes world conferences and makes recommendations on various problems. Although it has no power to force member nations to follow its recommendations, its recommendations carry a heavy moral weight that cannot be ignored. Regular sessions are held from mid-September to mid-December, although emergency sessions may be called. All member nations are represented in the General Assembly and each one has one vote.

SECURITY COUNCIL

The Security Council maintains international peace and security. Under the Charter, all United Nations members agree to accept and carry out the decisions of the Security Council. There are 15 members, five of which are the permanent members (US, United Kingdom, USSR, China, France). Each nation has one vote, and decisions on procedure require at least 9 votes. However, important decisions require 9 votes, 5 of which must be from all the permanent members.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL COUNCIL

The Economic and Social Council meets twice a year and its programs are aimed at achieving a better life for the world's peoples. Its principal vehicle for carrying out this idea is the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), a technical assistance program which helps countries develop resources.

TRUSTEESHIP COUNCIL

The Trusteeship Council supervises the administration of trust territories which are placed under the international trusteeship system. Of the original 11, only one remains, the Pacific Islands. The Trusteeship Council helps the peoples of territories grow towards self-government or independence.

INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE

The International Court of Justice, popularly known as the World Court, is the principal judicial organ of the United Nations. There are 15 judges who are elected by the General Assembly and the Security Council. No two judges may be from the same nation.

SECRETARIAT

The Secretariat, headed by a Secretary-General, services the other five organs of the United Nations. His/her staff, representing experts in their various fields of journalism, personnel administration, and the like prepares the reports for the bodies of the United Nations, arranges the meetings, edits the official records, and performs other duties. The Secretary-General can also bring to the attention of the Security Council any matters which could threaten world peace and security.

III. SPECIALIZED AGENCIES AND OTHER BODIES

There are 14 specialized agencies having broad responsibilities in the economic, social, cultural, educational, health, and related fields which bring their responsibilities into relationship with the UN. These specialized agencies are all independently established, with their own budget, staff and publications. The General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council are responsible for the coordination of their policies and activities. The specialized agencies are: Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO), Inter-Governmental Maritime Consultative Organization (IMCO), International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (IBRD, World Bank), International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO), International Development Association (IDA), International Finance Corporation (IFC), International Labour Organisation (ILO), International Monetary Fund (IMF), International Telecommunication Union (ITU), United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), Universal Postal Union (UPU), World Health Organization (WHO), World Intellectual Property Organization (WIPO), and World Meteorological Organization (WMO).

The General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) and the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) are other bodies connected with the UN. The GATT is a multi-lateral treaty administered by a secretariat, and it does not have a formal status. The IAEA is an autonomous intergovernmental organ which may report the the General Assembly or the Security Council.

IV. INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT THE UNITED NATIONS

Membership is open to all nations desiring peace and willing to abide by the Charter. At this time there are 152 member nations of the United Nations.

There are more than 3,800 meetings held each year.

Of the some 2,000 languages spoken in the world, over 150 are represented at the United Nations; however, there are only six official languages used: Arabic, English, French, Chinese, Russian, and Spanish.

The first site of the United Nations Secretariat was Church House in London and the first General Assembly meeting was at Central Hall, Westminister.

Costs for the United Nations headquarters were $67,093,290 plus $6,703,567 for the Dag Hammerskjold Library. Land for the site is valued at $9,600,000.

The site for the United Nations headquarters is owned by the United Nations and is international territory.

All member nations contribute to the United Nations annual budget. The amount they pay is determined by the General Assembly according to their ability to pay. The US paid $3,047,292 in 1979.

There are 4,500 typewriters for writing in 15 languages.

There are one and one-half miles of elevator shaftways at the United Nations headquarters, and the elevators travel over 350 miles per day.

There are 5,400 windows in the Secretariat building and 6,600 windows in the headquarters.

There are 300 press and radio correspondents and 110 photographers permanently accredited to the United Nations.

The largest military force organized by the United Nations was the Congo force with over 20,000 men.
